U

u The high back vowel in Zulu; tongue-position somewhat lower than that for phon. cardinal vowel No. 8, but lips fully rounded; this is a pure vowel, resembling the Northern English sound in 'food' (fu:d) or the first part of the diphthong in the Southern English pronunciation of that word; Zulu u, even when short, is always tense. This vowel occurs short (u), long (u:), and with prolonged length (u::) in Zulu: it is normally long when penult. in a word, and prolonged in certain ideophones, e.g. ulukhú:ni or u:khú:ni, zé:nu, thú:má, kú:ɓo; ukú:thi búcu, ukú:thi qu::. Current orthography does not mark the length, but a short stressed vowel in penult. positn. is indicated by a stress mark as above, and prolonged length may be indicated by doubling the vowel.

X x (ɔk) This symbol represents the lateral click, pronounced with the back of the tongue raised to touch the soft palate, upper part of tongue-tip against the division between teeth-ridge and hard palate, centre of tongue depressed; in enunciation one side of the tongue against the upper side teeth is withdrawn, causing lateral suction. The radical form is represented by x, the aspirated by xh, the voiced by gx, and the nasal by nx. The velar nasal consonant before the voiced form is represented by ngx, and the rare instances of the velar nasal before the unvoiced form by nkx.

The radical form x, under homorganic nasal influence, becomes ngx, e.g. xoxa (relate) >ingxoxo (account).
